DESIGN PRIZE SWITZERLAND – Edition 2013/14
Announcement of the NOMINATIONS

Langenthal, 8 September 2013 – The nominations for Design Prize Switzerland 2013/14 have been decided: out of some 300 projects submitted, the nominating teams have now recommended 37 to the jury as candidates for this year’s prize awards. Their choice reflects contemporary developments in design: projects connected with sustainability are represented, as are products of the investment goods industry.

In comparison with 2011, nominators and jurors have found a clear improvement in the quality of the works submitted, and have expressed their pleasure at the fact that there has been an equally significant increase in the variety. Nominations have not been restricted to product innovations - revolutionary techniques and developments in material technology also testify to the powerfully innovative imagination which sets the tone of Edition 2013/14 of Design Prize Switzerland. For example, the nominated entries include a production technique in which a new biologically degradable material features. This rise in quality and variety of the content also explains why as many as 37 projects - a greater than average number - have been recommended as potential prize candidates.

It is also worthy of note that French-speaking Switzerland has contributed more projects to the competition than in past years. This may be a reflection, on the one hand, of the increasing prestige of Design Prize Switzerland. On the other, it also means that the event offers a clearer and more holistic view of the design creativity of the nation as a whole. The products and projects submitted are distributed between the different professional fields as follows: Communication 5, Fashion 5, Furniture 6, Interdisciplinary Projects 3, Interior 4, Product 8 and Textiles 6.

The 12th award ceremony of the competition, which is held every two years, will take place in Langenthal on Friday, 1 November 2013. This will also mark the inauguration of an expansion of the programme - for the first time, the exhibition of the nominated and prizewinning works, which opens on 2 November, will be supplemented by workshops and a symposium. It is hoped that the expanded supporting programme will help establish the significance of Design Prize Switzerland as a promotion platform and stimulate discussion about outstanding Swiss design.

DESIGN PRIZE SWITZERLAND – Edition 2013/14

General information

About Design Prize Switzerland

Design Prize Switzerland is being held in 2013 for the twelfth time. The competition is designed to boost the importance of Swiss design, so prizes are awarded for outstanding performance in seven professional fields. The competition does not see itself as being just a prize contest - at the same time it is an institution which aims, through the award of prizes, to establish Swiss design more firmly in the economy.

In a two-phase procedure, the projects submitted are nominated by acknowledged specialists for consideration by the jury. The jury, composed of international experts, then awards prizes to the best of the nominated works. Entries for the competition come from Swiss designers, companies and institutions based in Switzerland or abroad, as well as designers from other countries who are working in Switzerland. Products that have been made in Switzerland are also eligible for entry. As a result, Design Prize Switzerland achieves a broad spectrum of competition entrants and a wide relevance. Diploma projects are represented, as are commercial brands, manufacturers and institutions.

The high prestige of Design Prize Switzerland in the Swiss design scene is based on its being focused on the market economy, and on the fact that it undergone ongoing development ever since the first edition in 1991. Its increase in significance is also partly attributable to the international travelling exhibition, which drew a lot of attention to the prizewinning entries in 2009 and 2011. The travelling exhibition is designed to open up growth potential in markets abroad. So in the 2013/14 edition, the travelling exhibition will again be showing the prizewinning entries on an international stage. The exhibition will be on view initially at the Design Prize Switzerland showroom; it will continue from 2 November 2013 until 26 January 2014 in Langenthal (Mühleweg 14).

The prize categories

Out of seven professional fields, prizes are awarded in three main categories: Market, Newcomer and Research. In close cooperation with partners in industry, three specific awards are also made: the RADO Product Design Award, the PFISTER Interior Design Award and the two Swiss Textile Design Awards by SWISS TEXTILES & ZUMSTEG FOUNDATION: A (for innovative solutions involving textiles) and B (for innovative projects in the textiles field). The awards are given by the independent jury, based on special qualifying criteria through which the competition's industrial partners are hoping to provide new impetus.

Each edition of Design Prize Switzerland also involves the jury’s award of the Merit Prize. This pays tribute to the ongoing design contribution of prominent design personalities, prestigious studios or highly regarded companies and institutions which have exercised a clear influence on the history and present status of Swiss design. This prize is a nomination in the literal sense - it is not possible to apply for it.

The main prize money in the three categories Market, Newcomer and Research comes to a total of CHF 75,000. The awards are endowed as follows: RADO Product Design Award CHF 25,000, PFISTER Interior Design Award CHF 25,000 and CHF 50,000 for each of the two Swiss Textile Design Awards by SWISS TEXTILES & ZUMSTEG FOUNDATION.
